

2021-06-07

A map of California with its counties outlined. The counties are filled with colors representing a numerical value for the variable 'mean'. The colors range from dark blue (lowest values) to dark red (highest values). The map shows a clear spatial pattern, with higher values concentrated in the central and southern regions, particularly in the Central Valley and the South Coast, and lower values in the northern and mountainous regions.